 Learning
by Questions

Special offer
for Waltham
Forest Schools

Before and during lockdown, Learning by Questions (LbQ) has been used in a number of Waltham Forest Schools supporting in school and distance learning with great success.

Learning by Questions (LbQ) working in conjunction with David Kilgallon, Director of Learning and Systems Leadership, Families & Homes Directorate; The London Borough of Waltham Forest would like to offer Waltham Forest School's a fantastic offer to purchase LbQ.

Learning by Questions is an essential classroom teaching and learning tool, but it is also being used by schools as a distance learning system to allow learners to log in from home. LbQ is cloud based and enables learners to join a session using personal computers, tablets, Chromebooks and iPads.

What a Waltham Forest Teachers Says About LbQ...

Both in school and whilst school has been closed, LbQ has been an invaluable resource, providing a range of English, Maths and Science question sets for my Year 6 pupils. With LbQ, I am also able to see which children are accessing work at home and assess their misconceptions along the way. With the instant feedback built into each question, most misconceptions are addressed almost instantly for the children. I have received great parent feedback and the children love using it!
